Transitional Housing, Emergency Housing, Support Services, Job Training, Individual Counseling and Group Counseling.

1183 Madison This program provides up to a 30-day stay for the hardest to serve homeless veterans. Placement may be extended for up to two years. Residency in the program will give the hard-to-reach and serve homeless veterans a period of time, to develop some of the social skills necessary to maintain their sobriety, access, and effectively take advantage of supportive services. Successful entry into and participation in this program can serve as a conduit into the Alpha Omega Veterans Services continuum of housing services. .

Defense Depot The "Drop-In" service center provides services to other homeless veterans residing in other facilities (shelter, transitional housing) and those on the street. The Center provides services to homeless veterans for a minimum of 40 hours per week over a minimum of 5 days a week and on a as needed unscheduled basis. The Service Center is a comfortable, safe place where homeless veterans can go to receive services, socialize with peers, read the daily paper, shower, use the phone (local) and come in off the street during the hours when many shelters are closed.

1467 War Memorial Drive Help veterans with severe persistent mental illness and /or substance-related disorders to obtain and remain in permanent housing, increase their skills and/or income, and achieve greater self-determination. As a community-based effort the permanent housing is located in a residential neighborhood where many services and amenities are located. Through the provision of coordinated case management services, residents are connected to essential support services as well as activities that transform survival into "living" in a balanced healthy fashion.

Jefferson Street Aftercare transitional housing program serves as a conduit into permanent housing. While in residence clients focal points are increased awareness in community socialization, sustaining employment and increased residential stability. Services include needs assessment, case management, education and employment counseling. The goal of the service and program are to empower the individual to be self sustaining.

(See foundations and funding sources)

In October of 2003, the Department of Health and Human Services, through the Federal Compassion Capital Fund awarded Tacoma (WA), Memphis (TN), Phoenix (AZ) and Knoxville (TN) a grant of $748,438 (the largest of 60 grants), to implement a Four-City Demonstration Project. As a result, each of our cities is currently linking their experience and resources to increase the program and organizational capabilities of more than 80 faith- and community-based organizations (20 or more organizations in each city) that serve the individuals and families in the following categories: at-risk youth, people who are homeless, prisoners reentering the community, children of prisoners, addicts, elders in need, families moving from welfare to work, and couples working to form and sustain healthy marriages. The services of participating organizations and networks will expand, their funding will increase, their programming will become more effective, and stronger collaborations will be formed to address specific human service needs.

Dedicated to helping people find meaning and purpose in their lives and offers various activities for personal growth and transformation. The HART Center provides everything from counseling, energy work, massage, and drumming circles to other deeper processes to help people go inward utilizing breath, music, and art. The HART Center offers Inner Quest for treatment services to people who want to release attachment to food, nicotine, drugs, alcohol, sex, and unhealthy lifestyles. The HART Center works with other agencies to provide a continuum of care to those who need long term therapy for a variety of reasons. It is a licensed out-patient addiction treatment center that uses many complimentary methods of care. Auricular acupuncture is utilized to assist in the detoxification process in the early stages of detachment to reduce cravings for those releasing unhealthy behaviors. Eye Movement Desensitization and Reprocessing (EMDR) is used to assist those who are healing wounds from trauma. Licensed qualified therapists work with people to change their beliefs and release emotional spiritual physical blockages that create barriers to transformation. With these approaches they may deepen their inner journey with movement, dance, and other arts to assist them in allowing expression and creativity to shift their consciousness and empower their process. The HART Center is a grand example of a balanced approach through the utilization of traditional and complimentary approaches to healing, addiction treatment, and personal transformation. The training aspect provides continuing education for other professionals in the counseling field. And, research is utilized to learn how each component works to help activate the inner healer/teacher of an individual toward emotional spiritual physical balance.

Following conviction, all offenders receive a mandatory alcohol assessment/evaluation (if available) to determine the nature and extent of their alcohol problems. However, not all counties have facilities that can conduct such assessments. The assessment is conducted post-sentencing. The court does not take the results of the assessment into consideration in final sentencing. Assessments are conducted by the Department of Mental Health or by a private agency at the direction of the court. Treatment (if available) for repeat offenders is mandatory as a condition of probation for a 2nd offense. All offenders are required to attend alcohol education or treatment as recommended by the assessment.

A person served has exhausted his or her support network, experienced repeated personal failures, and no longer believes he or she can change. The work of the ministry is to turn that belief around by facilitating a series of small successes which will eventually lead to self-sufficiency. Services come with strings attached. Participants must attend meetings, enter treatment, seek employment, and mentor and support each other. In return, they receive vouchers for meals and shelter, and a supportive group of peers. The ministry seeks to give a minimum of support to each person, so as not to foster further dependency. Any assistance, such as a food or shelter voucher, is contingent on the client's willingness to address his or her own primary issue. The programs of the Street Ministry aim to assist people to take control of their own lives, rather than helping them live more comfortably on the street.

Mental health problems can interfere with the way children think, feel and act, just as they do for adults with mental health difficulties. These problems are real and painful. They can lead to school failure, family conflicts, drug abuse, violence or even suicide. A young person's current and future ability to be productive can be limited by mental health problems. In addition, these problems can be very costly to families, communities and the health care system.
